

(Brief) According to the monitoring outcome via Yiwu, China Commodity Index (hereafter referred to as the Yiwu Index) Information System, the business index of January kept falling to 1189.82 point, decreased by 0.65% as compared with the previous month (due to the closed business in the same month in the last year, there's no data on year-on-year basis, however, the point is higher than that of the same month in 2015 and 2016); the price index of the month was 100.22 point, increased by 0.1% as compared with the previous month. The Spring Festival around the corner enables the market to maintain its prosperity, and the monthly business was mainly supported by the domestic and foreign trade replenishment: in respect to the domestic market, the merchant strengthened the handling of warehoused products, which led to the increase of wholesale and retail handling of warehoused products, which led to the increase of wholesale and retail business in small amount; in respect to the export, the foreign merchant strengthened the purchase in order to meet the demand in the Spring Festival. As influenced by the above mentioned factors, the trade volume and the turnover in January witnessed marginal increase, with the confidence index kept increasing. Nonetheless, the fund and commodity flows confronted a slowing-down due to the decelerated launching of new products in the market, and the benefit index decreased slightly as a result.
